Collegiate Training Compass:

WORK ETHIC

What: Each EDGE staff has clarity on how to do their job well, is growing in faithfulness with their given responsibilities and understands their role and impact on a team.

Why: Most of us will work over 100,000 hours during the course of our lives. And for many, EDGE Corps is their first post-college job. Trainers have the unique chance to give instruction, encouragement and feedback so EDGERS learn to work hard, rest well and see God develop their character and a skill set that will serve them and future employers.

Questions for your radar:

- Where do they need help managing time?
- Are there cultural norms (timeliness, authority, etc) leading to missed expectations about our work environment? How do we talk about these?
- Do they have rhythms of rest? Fun? Relationships?
- What is their impact on the rest of the team?
